

This article describes the evolution and early implementation of the Don't Forget Us curriculum, a health education and disease prevention program for urban American Indians.